Some schools to require indoor masks

Jefferson County returns to 'orange'

BY BOB DEMAREE

New cases of COVID-19 are on the increase throughout Indiana and Kentucky, and all local counties are being impacted.

On Wednesday, the Indiana Department of Health announced that both Jefferson and Switzerland counties in Indiana have been downgraded to an "Orange" advisory level, indicating medium to high community spread. Meanwhile, the Kentucky Department of Public Health reported high incidence rates in both Trimble and Carroll counties where the status has been downgraded to "Red" or critical.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has placed all four counties in its "red" level for high rate of community transmission and spread

Jefferson County had previously been in a "Yellow" advisory for moderate community spread while Switzerland County had previously been "Blue" for low community spread.

A press release from the Jefferson County Health Department on Tuesday, recommended universal masking for all individuals in public settings regardless of vaccination status. JCHD also recommended universal indoor masking for all teachers, staff, students and visitors to K-12 schools, regardless of vaccination status.

Madison Consolidated Schools responded to that on Wednesday by announcing changes to reopening plans ahead of the first day of school on Aug. 11.

Effective immediately, mask wearing will be required inside of facilities whether vaccinated or vaccinated. Students will be required to wear masks until the county's numbers are back under control — including students attending classes at Ivy Tech — and all open houses have been postponed. Additionally, no visitors will be permitted in MCS buildings until further notice including community use of any facilities.

At Southwestern, Laura Cash Boldery, assistant to the superintendent, said classes would begin there on schedule Thursday morning, and no changes

Contractors were busy milling rough spots and laying and rolling new asphalt while patching bad spots on Madison's Main Street on Wednesday morning. Work was well ahead of schedule on the project, which will later include filling cracks, sealing and striping, to extend the useful life of the road from Jefferson Street to the top of Hanover Hill until a $5 million federal high grant is available in 2026.

QUICK WORK

Main Street repairs progressing faster than officials anticipated

BY BOB DEMAREE

Road contractors so far are making quick work of Madison's Main Street improvement project with faster progress than anticipated and that's relating to less impact on local residents and businesses.

Madison Deputy Mayor Mindy McGee told members of the Redevelopment Commission on Monday that work to patch holes and rough spots that was expected to take about a week to complete will be done much sooner. In fact, by the end of work on Tuesday, both sides of Main Street had been completed from Jefferson Street in the east to the railroad incline bridge in the west.

"Initially, the part of the project completed in just two days was anticipated to take four days," McGee said, adding that starting Wednesday the project would continue west from the incline bridge to the top of Hanover Hill and then back down the other side to the incline bridge.

"All patching will be done this week," she said. "That's fantastic."

Madison Street Supervisor Tony Sorrells agreed during his report to City Council on Tuesday night. "The Main Street coordination has gone really, really well," he said.

McGee noted the project includes almost 200 areas that need patching — some larger than others — but in the end she's not certain how many will be done. "Kenny Washer has done a fantastic job of monitoring the tonnage on the asphalt use. We're limited to about 1,150 tons for the entire project, and he said we've done really well. We've used less than 500 on the Main Street section" up to the incline bridge.

Tyler dreams of big future

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

"Jordan has the total package," says Jerry Wade, owner of Mad Paddle Brewery. "You know, I get a lot of musicians who come through here, even some awesome Nashville talent. And many of them have the great voice. Some have the powerful stage presence. But very few have it all together. The first time I saw Jordan sing I knew he had something special."

"I really owe my current musical career to Jerry at Mad Paddle," says Jordan Tyler. "I hadn't played or sang for about five years, but then one night I was sitting on the Mad Paddle patio listening to Joe Perkinson and Deano Crafton. I knew Joe from when I was a kid. He coached several teams I played on, and he was a frequent substitute teacher.

"So Joe sees me and says, get up here Jordan, sing a couple songs! So I did, and it felt great. And as I was coming back to my table Jerry stops me and says, Jordan, you've got real talent. You need to start playing again.

"That was so great for Jerry to say that, and super encouraging, but for me it's easier said than done. You see, I have this kind of timing blindness when it comes to music. It's hard for me to hear the beat and know when to start singing. It might be tied to my ADD, I don't know.

"The timing trouble was actually part of the reason I quit playing back in 2015. It was just so hard for me. But then here's Jerry encouraging me. And Deano Crafton stepped up and said he'd work with me and help me. How could I say no?

"So for like five months Deano

Body of missing Madison resident recovered

BY THE COURIER STAFF

The body of a Madison man who was reported missing near Salem, Indiana, last Thursday was located late on Tuesday.

A local farmer contacted Washington County Sheriff Brent Miller late Tuesday evening after finding an article of clothing in one of his fields on a farm off State Road 135, which is on the opposite side of the highway and just east of where Dillan W. Burgan, 29, of Madison, was last seen.

Miller began searching the area on foot and located the body a short time later several hundred yards off the highway in a heavily wooded area. Indiana State Police Detective Travis Baker, ISP crime scene investigators, and the Washington County Coroner's office were called to the scene.

Governor extends deadline for READI proposals

Madison application already submitted, Switzerland holding workshop meetings

BY BOB DEMAREE

Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb announced on Monday an extended submission deadline for the Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative (READI), providing regions an additional 30 days to submit proposals —now due on or before Sept. 30.

Each of the regions spanning participation across 91 counties will continue working to collaborate and develop strategic plans to accelerate small- and large-scale growth

Ripley woman dies in crash on US 421

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A Ripley County woman died in a crash between a car and a box truck on US 421 near Rexville on Tuesday afternoon.

Mary L. Hunt, 80, of Versailles, Indiana, was traveling southbound on US 421 near County Road 925 South when, for an unknown reason, her 2004 Oldsmobile crossed the centerline into the path of a northbound 2016 International box truck driven by Ronald Chigumira, 34, Avon, Indiana.

Chigumira took evasive action to avoid Hunt's car but the vehicles collided head-on in the roadway with both vehicles leaving the roadway before coming to a stop.

The accident occurred at about 1:30 p.m. and Hunt was pronounced dead at the scene by the Ripley County Coroners Office while Chigumira was treated for minor injuries at the scene and was released.

Master Trooper Ben Bastin, of the Indiana State Police-Versailles Post, is investigating. Alcohol and drugs are not believed to be factors in the collision although toxicology results are pending and the investigation is ongoing. The crash and investigation blocked traffic on US 421 for about three hours.

Bastin was assisted by Senior Troopers Kyle Black and Matthew Holley, Trooper Andrew Garrett, the Ripley County Sheriffs Office, Ripley County EMS and the New Marion and Versailles fire departments.

and I holed up in the garage and worked on songs. Deano had the patience of a saint, I have to tell you. I'd mess up and he'd just smile and we'd start again.

"I should also mention my other guys who have been with me on this journey. Scott Stewart has been our drummer. George Murphy plays bass. And Joseph Stakelin has been with me since 2012, playing rhythm and really being my right-hand man.

"So we're about a year into the adventure now, and I really feel like I've come a long way. To watch me now you'd never suspect the timing issues I had. It lets me really relax and concentrate on my performance. One hundred% I wouldn't be where I am now without this group of guys.

"And beyond the band, I've also gained this huge support group of dedicated local fans who keep me going. They're the reason I play music, really.

"Who else? Well, my dad, of course, Shawn Blanton. He's the lead singer in the band Memphis Reigns, and probably my biggest motivation to keep pushing and getting better. He's helping me take the right steps as my career develops.

"My ultimate dream, and this may sound kind of pie in the sky to some people, but my dream is to go to Nashville, put in the work and catch some breaks, and get my name on the map. Then I want to come back to Madison and play the big festivals here. I want to help spread the word about our amazing music town.

"I don't know if my dream will come true, nobody ever knows. But I know I can try, and I know I'm going to give it my best shot. Hopefully, five or 10 years from now, the whole world will know the name Jordan Tyler."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

If I've learned one thing as an owner of Red Bicycle Hall, it's that people really do love a Tom Petty tribute band. And for good reason. Tom Petty's music is some of the most popular and enduring of the late 20th century. So if you want to "get your Petty on" you'll want to be at Mad Paddle Brewery this Saturday for She Loves Horses. Another great Saturday option, just a short walk from Mad Paddle, is the annual Toga Party at Thomas Family Winery. Celtic rock band Highland Reign will be turning the energy up to 11. And if traditional band music is more your style, you'll want to mark your calendar for next Tuesday at the Brown Gym on Broadway. The Madison Community Concert Band, after a long COVID absence, is back with a fun concert of your favorite, rousing tunes at 7:30 p.m.

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

within their communities and work to secure matching funding through the state's $500 million initiative.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney on Tuesday told members of the city's Redevelopment Commission about the city's application that has already been submitted to Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority, the region in which Jefferson County is located and also includes Clark, Floyd, Scott and Washington counties.

The OurSIRDA is in the process of reviewing the plans that were submitted by its July 20 deadline, and now is working to determine what it will submit to the Indiana Economic Development Commission (IEDC) in the fall. The first round of investment decisions by the IEDC are scheduled to be made and announced in December.

"We submitted two plans, one plan was for workforce development and the second plan was destination development," said Courtney, who said they were multi-faceted proposals including housing, education, tourism, infrastructure, performance, venues and different types of economic development strategies throughout the city.

Courtney said the proposal includes a total of $150 million in economic development that he projected could happen over the next two to five years and "would have a quarter-billion dollar impact to the Madison and Jefferson County economies. So it's really significant," he said, noting the city applied for $11 million of READI grant money to support the projected economic development activity.

"There was a lot of private capital investment through workforce expansion and housing," which Courtney said are the anchors of the plan. "What we really have is a real solid plan with a lot of different initiatives that are way beyond the concept stage" that involve locations, partners, dollar amounts and economic development driven.

"We're really happy with the READI grant process even though it took a lot of work," Courtney said. "It was like cramming for a final in college. We only had a few days to pull it together ... I'm happy with the way the plan turned out."

Courtney said the city's proposal would include match amounts through three different ways — property that would be contributed, tax abatement that might be granted and/or actual direct financial contributions.

"We've not come through this body or city council for anything specific yet other than generally talk about this because it's still really fluid," he said, noting the process would involve incorporation into the region plan, and then what the final result would be if adopted by the state. "As we progress and get more information and this really firms up, we'll have an idea of what level of financial commitment the city would have to make."

In the SEI READI region, which includes counties, cities, towns, private businesses, institutions and philanthropic organizations in Dearborn, Franklin, Ripley, Ohio, Switzerland and Union counties, community workshops are being held to better determine economic development goals.

A workshop in Switzerland County has been scheduled for 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Friday at the Switzerland County Technology and Education Center in Vevay. The workshops are being conducted in partnership with Thomas P. Miller and Associates (TPMA), an economic development consulting firm, based in Indianapolis.

"We will set forward-thinking strategic goals in our effort to obtain READI funding for the benefit of the whole region. This is an instance where local ideas and feedback could truly be transformational, " said Lindsay Bloos, Senior Project Consultant at TPMA. "We want to engage everyone in the region who has ideas to improve quality of life and attract talent, innovation, and investment."

To register for the community workshops, visit http://www.southeastindiana.org/. The site also contains additional information about the SEI READI regional collaboration and has a place for the public to submit ideas, show support, and a form for Southeast Indiana organizations to submit their projects.

have been made to the school corporation's COVID re-opening plan that was approved at the July school board meeting. In that plan, it is highly recommended that masks be worn by students and staff in situations where social distancing is not possible.

On Wednesday afternoon, Prince of Peace Schools President Phil Kahn said that while the county is under an "Orange" status that masks will be required in indoor settings where social distancing is not possible.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney addressed the new numbers at Tuesday's city council meeting, noting the state was seeing "reappearance in a somewhat significant way" for COVID numbers and city and local health officials "will be evaluating our policies on public health and public meetings."

The JCHD release noted there have been no group setting outbreaks in the county at this time, but there have been cases of the Delta variant reported in Jefferson County. The Delta variant now accounts for 100% of Indiana samples being tested for variants. People infected with the Delta variant carry up to 1,000 times more virus in their nasal passages than other strains, resulting in higher transmissibility with breakthrough infections even among the vaccinated.

Jefferson County has had 17 breakthrough cases reported — approximately 0.1% of vaccinated individuals experiencing breakthrough cases — which is also the statewide percentage. However, breakthrough cases are experiencing less severe illness than those unvaccinated so vaccinations are preventing severe illness and hospitalizations.

In an interview after the meeting, Courtney said the numbers "have to be taken seriously" but noted that the data falls short of indicating a major outbreak that would overwhelm hospitals. He noted that breakthrough numbers are fractionally low and while about half of Jefferson County's residents have been vaccinated the number for the highest risk categories — age 65 and older — is 90.2% and there may be others with natural immunity or antigens to develop antibodies.

"We need to take a thoughtful look at the data," Courtney said. "If you are unvaccinated you need to take precautions ... and if you are to take any silver lining out of the situation, our older people are highly vaccinated."

In Jefferson County, there were 30 new cases of COVID-19 in the previous day, bringing total overall cases to 3,545 with a death toll of 87. Jefferson County is reporting 45.5% of its residents fully vaccinated, according to the CDC.

In Switzerland County, there have been nine new cases of COVID-19, bringing the overall total to 865 with eight dead. Switzerland County has 24.5% of its residents fully vaccinated.

For the state of Indiana, there were 1,774 new positive cases of COVID-19 in the last day, bringing the overall total to 777,417. Also, there were 14 new deaths, which lifted the overall total to 13,610.

On Aug. 3, KDPH announced 1,803 new positive cases of COVID-19 in Kentucky, bringing the state's total to 487,871. There were four additional deaths which pushed Kentucky's death total during the pandemic to 7,352.

The incidence rate of COVID-19 in Trimble County is now at 40.5%. One additional COVID-19 death has been recorded in Trimble County, bringing the total to eight. There were six new cases of COVID-19 in Trimble County, taking the overall total to 747.

In Carroll County, the incidence rate is 40.3%. The death total in Carroll County remains at 21, but there were seven new cases of COVID-19, which changed the overall total to 1,081.

Jefferson County Health Department is accepting walk-ins at its office for COVID-19 vaccinations at its office at 715 Green Road, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Three vaccines, Pfizer, Moderna and Johnson & Johnson are available. Individuals ages 12-17 must receive Pfizer vaccine and have an adult present.

For anyone who is sick, testing should be sought right away and stay away from others until results are available. Free testing is available at the Jefferson County community testing site at King's Daughters' Hospital Convenient Care, 445 Clifty Drive.

Switzerland County Health Department continues to operate a vaccine clinic at 1190 West Main Street, Vevay. There will be a vaccine clinic Thursday, Aug 12, at Belterra from noon to 2 p.m.

All Kentuckians can sign up for a COVID-19 vaccination appointment near where they live or work at vaccine.ky.gov.

He was born on Feb. 9, 1937, on Plum Creek Road in Switzerland County, Indiana, to Andrew Peter and Sadie Mae Peters Green. He was raised in Switzerland County and attended Plum Creek Grade School and Vevay High School. He was inducted into the US Army and served in Korea for two years before returning to Vevay. He married Dollie Ann Reese on Dec. 23, 1960, in Madison, and they had four children. He was employed for Grote Industries in Madison and Hilltop Basic Resources in Patriot for several years. He followed his father as driver of Bus No. 21 for the Switzerland County School Corporation for 10 years before becoming Director of Transportation for the school corporation until retiring in 2018 after 32 years of service. He enjoyed his job with the school, supervising the bus drivers and managing the bus routes. He loved traveling to his grandchildren's sporting events and watching them compete. He enjoyed shopping, buying expensive shoes and Polo shirts and sweaters, as well as wearing good smelling cologne. He enjoyed sitting in his car listening to the oldies on radio and loved sitting on his front porch watching cars and trucks go by and keeping an eye on the neighbors and bird watching.

Survivors include his wife of Patriot; his children, Andrew Green, Reesea Jackson, both of Patriot and Charla Azbell of Indianapolis; two sisters, Lucille Phillips of Vevay and Linda Poling of Quercus Grove, Indiana; and five grandchildren, three great grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents; a daughter, Deanna Lynn Green, on Oct. 4, 2017; four sisters, Dorothy Mae Scott, Meredith Scudder, Mary Catherine McManis and Alberta G. Reed; and his brothers, Marvin Green, Allen Green, Arthur "Buddy" Green, Charles Green and Galen M. Green.

Funeral services will be at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 7, at the Haskell & Morrison Funeral Home in Vevay. Visitation is 5 p.m. until time of services Saturday, at the funeral home.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Ivan Andrew Green Memorial Fund or Keeping Pace Cancer Fund through the funeral home or online at www.haskellandmorrison.com.

WORK

The first phase of the project includes milling and patching on Main Street from Jefferson Street to the top of Hanover Hill. Although that work should be done much sooner than expected, contractor Dave O'Mara will stick to the agreed upon schedule of delaying start on the second phase until after the Madison Ribberfest on Aug. 20-21.

"We'll let everything rest until after Ribberfest," said McGee, "and then after Ribberfest the other crew will come in and do crack sealing, liquid asphalt and restriping" which she said will be finished before the Madison Chautauqua Festival of Art on Sept. 25-26.

McGee said the quick work helped reduce disruption along the four-lane portions of the highway in downtown Madison, where parking restrictions and traffic diversions allowed workers to access to quickly make repairs. She said they tried to "give a heads up" when work was being done on lanes and kept traffic flowing by diverting vehicles to the lanes not being patched.

"I don't think they were blocking store frontages for more than an hour or so at each spot. I am very happy with their work and Kenny's support on it," McGee said.

The city hopes the project will extend the useful life of Main Street, which the city agreed to assume control and maintenance of from the Indiana Department of Transportation as part of the new gateway to the Milton-Madison Bridge, for up to five years until a $5 million federal grant will help pay for a total milling and repaving project.

Meanwhile, INDOT will close State Road 7 from Main Street to the top of Hanging Rock Hill for approximately three hours today for so maintenance crews can remove dead trees that have fallen and clear debris from the top of inlet drains.

Motorists will need to seek an alternate route during the hours of approximately 9 a.m. to noon.

BODY

The coroner positively identified the body as Burgan and his family has been notified.

There were no apparent signs of injury or trauma; however, an autopsy was scheduled for Wednesday to determine the cause of death and the case is still under investigation.

Gone goodbye

Dear Annie: My significant other and I were in a relationship for 15 years. One evening, I was feeling insecure and asked whether there was someone else. Very soon after that, my significant other completely cut off all contact with me.

We were in a commitment and planning to get married, but now there is absolutely no communication, which just drives me to want to contact him even more than I would have in the past.

I'm trying to stay anchored in optimism, hoping that this storm will pass, he will get back in touch and we will restore our relationship.

How does a person shut down and not have any communication? This has spurred me to start obsessing. Without the ability to know when we will speak again, I feel paralyzed. It's very irritating, and it makes me feel totally separate from this person.

Wouldn't it create a better outcome if there were a resounding "no" or if we talked it through? How long do I hold on? Maybe it's too late. Or maybe even if he were to come back, I should be wary and concerned that he could have ever completely shut down like this. Thanks in advance for your input. — Left Behind

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Left: People often live in a state of open-ended anguish when a loved one goes missing or dies in a way that makes a body irretrievable. Denial is a stage of grief, and without concrete evidence of a person's death, it can be very hard to move past it.

Similarly, without a definite breakup from your partner, you're stuck in a holding pattern. That's what makes his cowardly behavior so unbelievably cruel and selfish.

If he has made himself totally unreachable, then you need to decide once and for all that things are over between you. Truly over. Only then can you have closure, properly mourn the relationship and move on.

I would ask what prompted your suspicions in the first place. Trust your intuition.

Dear Annie: Can you tell me a polite way to respond to a "friend" who constantly says mean things? For example, she'll say, "What's that line on your face?" "What happened to your arm? You have spots on it." "Wow! You have a big nose." She always does it while in the company of others, which embarrasses me. Often she doesn't even address me but makes the comments to other people within my earshot. I'm not sure what I did to deserve this, as I've only tried to be nice to her. Does she do this because she is insecure? I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I've reached a point where I don't want to be in her company anymore. — Frustrated Friend

Dear Frustrated: This woman is no friend; she is a frenemy. Forget being frustrated. You have my permission to be outraged.

Shaming a person in front of others is a form of bullying. You sound like a sweet person, and she has probably chosen you as the object of her animosity because of that. She mistakes your kindness for weakness.

Stand up for yourself the next time she insults you. I would suggest a comeback, but if you're not comfortable with that, then say something upbeat but firm, like, "Unless you're my doctor, I don't need you examining my skin." If there is some reason you can't or don't want to distance yourself from this bully, you need to at least keep her in check.

Neglected niece

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My heart hurts so much. Last January, my nephew was diagnosed with leukemia. He is 3 years old. He is only a little boy. He is so strong, and he tries to be a happy little guy. My sister is always talking about my nephew and how his appointments go, and that is fine; I want to hear about them and to know what the next steps are. But here is my problem. I also have a beautiful niece. She is 9 years old. I know my sister loves her very much, but it seems as if she gets put on the back burner when it comes to her brother. My question is: How can I bring this up to my sister without starting a fight? — Auntie of Two

Dear Auntie: I'm so sorry about your little nephew. It's understandable that your sister is fully focused on getting him well and hasn't considered how it may be affecting her daughter. When it comes to matters of life and death, people are prone to getting tunnel vision.

Rather than confront your sister about this issue right now — which might add guilt to the emotional burden she's already carrying — take actions on your own to see that your niece feels loved. A family isn't just nuclear, after all. If your sister sees you showering her daughter with love, she will appreciate it, and it may gently nudge her to consider whether she is spending enough time with her, too. Either way, your niece will be grateful for the bonding time with her awesome aunt.

Dear Annie: My friend and I were talking about people who threaten suicide if their partner leaves them. I thought this was just an immature and overly dramatic response to a breakup and not something the person making the threat had any intention of going through with. However, my friend revealed to me that this actually happened to a friend of hers. Her friend was seeing an older man who had another girlfriend at the time. This girlfriend threatened to kill herself if he left her. And then she did.

So I guess my question is: What should you do when your partner threatens suicide if you leave? — Steph in San Diego

Dear Steph: When a partner or anyone threatens suicide, you must take it seriously. Call the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 800-273-8255. The people there will help you assess the situation and determine what actions you can take and the resources available in your state.

I hope that man knows that what happened to his girlfriend was not his fault. If someone is threatening suicide if a partner leaves, there are underlying mental health problems that need professional treatment.

New coach Dale gets first taste of Trimble County

Longtime assistant looking to instil pride, ownership

BY LAUREN HANEY

Trimble County High School welcomed J.P. Dale to his first head coaching position with open arms and a barbecue dinner on Thursday at the school's football media day.

J.P. Dale

Dale has previously served as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach at Scott County and Lloyd Memorial, in addition to stints on the coaching staffs at Carroll County and Hanover College. Parents and players are both excited for the changes he can bring to the Raiders' program.

"Not only do they coach us but they have a motto that says 'You fit in,' " senior Jacob Brown said.

Another Trimble County football veteran, Spencer Stark, expects success for the Raiders this season.

"I feel like we'll be able to do something this year and have a decent team," Stark said. "We're really athletic and fast and have a good receiving corp."

Dale is optimistic coming into this season after seeing the work ethic, progress and success the program has shown during the summer 7-on-7 season.

"We may surprise a few folks; we might surprise ourselves a little bit. They weren't a very confident bunch coming into it, and we're working on that," Dale said. "I told them all from the get-go that they belong, that they're here to compete and we've done a great job of that so far, and I hope that we can keep that up and keep it rolling from here on out ...

GOLF ROUNDUP

Eder opens senior year with pair of impressive showings

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Madison's Keara Eder kicked off her senior campaign with a pair of impressive performances in the Cubs' girls golf season openers early this week.

On Monday, Eder shot a two-under 71 to finish third in the highly competitive Bloomington South Invitational and on Tuesday she carded a two-under 34 to take medalist honors in a three-way meet at Sunrise Golf Course.

"I was extremely proud of myself today when I shot a personal best of 2-under at Bloomington Country Club because I have really struggled in the past to shoot well there," Eder said of Monday's opener. "I'm glad that I had a good start to my senior season. I'm hoping to play well this year because it's my senior season and I want to play the best I can this year. My goal this year is to work on my short game and to get that going well so that my good days will become great and my bad days will become good days."

Eder enters her final high school season with high expectations. Despite winning three-straight sectional titles, Eder has advanced to the state finals only once and is hoping to go out on top.

"She was consistent all day tee to green. She really maybe only left two or three strokes out there, and with this game, that is really good," Madison coach Jake Shockley said. "I'm thrilled for Keara that she was able to go out there and sort of get that nemesis course out of the way. Hopefully, it is a harbinger for the rest of her season."

As a team, Madison shot a 424 to place 15th out of 20 teams. Grace Bronkella shot a 107, Gracie Gasaway a 117, Isa James a 135 and Reagan Warren carded a 129.

"I'm pleased with the day. The team score won't show it, but I saw a lot of good things out there today," Shockley said. "I think Grace and Gracie will just continue to get better as the season continues, plus it's a really tough course with slippery, sloping greens. If you're not used to those the putts go up fast. This was Isa and Reagan's first-ever competitive match for score and they got thrown to the wolves a little today. They both have things we can target along the way."

Westfield, behind low-medalist Sam Brown's six-under 67, won the tournament with a 295 while Carmel was second with a 302 and Castle third at 306. Faith Johnson of Evansville North shot a 70 to place second, just one stroke ahead of Eder.

On Tuesday, Madison was second in a three-way meet at Sunrise. Jennings County won the match with a 194, the Cubs shot 203 and Shawe had a 220.

In addition to Eder's 34, Gasaway had a 53, Bronkella a 54, Warren a 63 and Lily Fox a 66.

Last week, Eder closed out her summer season with a 10th-place finish in the Notah Begay III Junior Golf Championship Regional Qualifier in Lafayette.

Eder carded rounds of 75 and 77 to finish at eight-over 152, missing the qualifier for the national tournament by just six strokes. Twenty-four players competed in the event with the top two advancing to the finals.

Madison returned to action on Wednesday at the Seymour Invitational. The Cubs travel to Henryville next Monday.

Shawe, Switzerland open season

Switzerland County and Shawe Memorial each opened the season with a dual match at Belterra Resort Golf Course on Monday.

Switzerland County won with a 228 behind low-medalist Hailey Hines with a 48. Lily Williams shot 50, Brooklyn Flanders a 62 and Kenna Perkins a 68.

Shawe's Bailey Kilgore watches her shot during the Hilltoppers' tri-meet at Sunrise on Tuesday.

Shawe scored a 235 as a team. Kira Wells shot a 53, Bailey Kilgore and Yolett Perez each carded 59s, and Gia Craig had a 64.

"Belterra is a very challenging course to begin a new season on. When it's as dry as it has been lately, no amount of practice can prepare you for the speed of their greens," Shawe coach David Hertz said. "I thought our girls had some nice moments in their play. Any strokes lost were mostly on or around the green."

On Tuesday, Shawe was third in the three-way meet at Sunrise behind Madison and Jennings County with a 220. Kira Wells led the Hilltoppers with a 47, Bailey Kilgore carded a 55, Yolett Perez shot 58 and Gia Craig had a 60.

"As a team, we improved 15 strokes over last night's match at Belterra. Everyone shot lower and I was especially pleased with Kira and Bailey who shot six and four strokes better, respectively," Hertz said. "We were able to identify some things to work on and we have a couple of days to do that before we play at Butler Falls on Friday. All in all, there's not a whole lot to complain about at this early stage of the season."

Switzerland County heads to Jac-Cen-Del today while both Shawe and Switzerland play at Southwestern on Friday.

Colts add All-Pro guard to injury list

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WESTFIELD — The Indianapolis Colts' injury list keeps getting longer — and more baffling.

Three-time All-Pro guard Quenton Nelson was added Tuesday after suffering the same foot injury as new quarterback Carson Wentz, who had a fragment from the metatarsal bone removed Monday. Nelson was scheduled to undergo the same procedure with the same doctor Tuesday in Indianapolis.

Both are expected to miss five to 12 weeks, putting their availability for the Sept. 12 season-opener against Seattle in jeopardy.

There was one significant difference in the diagnosis: Wentz's injury appeared to be the result of an old injury that flared up when he planted his foot for a throw last Thursday while Nelson's, coach Frank Reich said, appeared to be the result of a condition he was born with. He got hurt Monday when a teammate apparently stepped on his foot.

Both injuries are another blow for a team that thought it could make a deep postseason run — if it could stay healthy.

The loss of Nelson could be huge.

He didn't miss a start in his first three NFL seasons while earning All-Pro and Pro Bowl honors every year. Nelson is regarded by many as the NFL's most dominant guard and has been a key component in making Indy's offensive line one of the league's best since general manager Chris Ballard traded back three spots and selected Nelson at No. 6 overall pick in 2018.

But after just six practices, the vaunted line — and Indy's depth — is being tested.

Starting center Ryan Kelly suffered a hyperextended left elbow after a collision with running back Marlon Mack on Thursday. Kelly is expected to miss a couple of weeks.

Longtime left tackle Anthony Castonzo retired in January and his projected replacement, two-time All-Pro Eric Fisher, is on the physically unable to perform list as he continues recovering from a torn Achilles tendon he suffered in January. Fisher isn't expected to be game-ready until late September or early October.

Julien Davenport, one of two veteran free agents expected to replace Fisher, is on the reserve/COVID-19 list.

Two-time All-Pro linebacker Darius Leonard also is out. He hasn't practiced since undergoing ankle surgery in June, though it appears he could be on the field soon.

Report: NCAA falling short on gender equity

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE SPORTS WRITER

The NCAA has fallen short of upholding its commitment to gender equity by prioritizing its cash cow Division I men's basketball tournament "over everything else," according a scathing review released Tuesday after an uproar over how the association conducts its championship events.

A law firm hired by the NCAA to investigate equity issues released a 113-page report that includes a series of recommendations, including holding the men's and women's Final Fours at the same site and offering financial incentives to schools to improve their women's basketball programs.

But it ripped the NCAA for falling into an entrenched approach to the women's game, preventing its growth and leading to an embarassing lack of equality with the men.

"With respect to women's basketball, the NCAA has not lived up to its stated commitment to 'diversity, inclusion and gender equity among its student-athletes, coaches and administrators,' " the report found.

The review was done by Kaplan Hecker & Fink LLP, which was hired in March after the NCAA failed to provide similar amenities to the teams in the men's and women's Division I basketball tournaments. The situation blew up on social media amid player complaints and prompted apologies from NCAA executives including President Mark Emmert.

In a statement, the NCAA Board of Governors said it is "wholly committed to an equitable experience among its championships" and called on Emmert to take urgent action. Coaches around the game applauded the review.

"I sure hope this report motivates major change!!!" Hall of Fame coach Tara VanDerveer of national champion Stanford said in a text message to AP.

Big East Commissioner Val Ackerman, who wrote a paper for the NCAA in 2013 that put forward some of the same recommendations, including a combined Final Four weekend, called the report a starting point.

"I don't think implementation will exactly be a snap, just given the cumbersome nature of the NCAA bureaucracy, but I hope this does inspire a sense of urgency about needed change," she said.

The report noted disparities were not confined to this year's tournaments and that the bedrock financial deal for the NCAA and its member schools is partly to blame: Kaplan said NCAA's structure and systems "are designed to maximize the value of and support to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship as the primary source of funding for the NCAA and its membership."

NCAA revenues surpassed $1 billion in the year before the pandemic and almost $900 million of that was tied to the media rights deal with CBS and Turner for the men's tournament.

The women's tournament, meanwhile, is part of a package with more than two dozen other NCAA championships that ESPN owns and pays about $34 million per year for through 2023-24. But according to an assessment done for Kaplan by a team of sports media and marketing experts, the women's tournament will be worth between $81 and $112 million annually beginning in 2025.

The report criticized the NCAA for failing to recognize or prepare for that growth in value and said revenue generated by the men's tournament's media deal leads to that event being prioritized "over everything else in ways that create, normalize and perpetuate gender inequities."

"We urge the NCAA to revisit with its media partners all broadcast rights agreements that include women's basketball — specifically its contract with ESPN — as soon as possible to ensure the NCAA, the conferences, and the member institutions are being fairly compensated for the product our sport puts on the floor," Women's Basketball Coaches Association executive director Danielle Donehew said in a statement.

ESPN, which has been credited by some for helping grow the game by airing the women's tournament exclusively since 1985, said it was reviewing the report.

"ESPN is committed to continuing to work with the NCAA and other stakeholders in women's basketball to enhance the NCAA Women's Basketball Championship and grow the game at all levels, while elevating the overall exposure of women's sports," the cable giant said.

Officials at CBS and Turner Sports did not immediately respond to messages seeking comment.

Women's leaders: NCAA can't let report sit on a shelf

BY ERIC OLSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eight years ago, in a report the NCAA asked Big East commissioner Val Ackerman to write, she recommended the men's and women's Final Fours be played at the same venue on the same weekend.

Val Ackerman

She also suggested the women's basketball tournament have its own television contract, not one combined with other sports as is currently the case, and that the NCAA streamline its governance structure, among other things.

Nothing happened.

After Tuesday's release of a report ripping the NCAA for failing to uphold gender equity in its management of men's and women's basketball, Ackerman said she's confident changes are coming because momentum is on the side of the women's game after the embarrassing revelations of unequal treatment of athletes at the 2021 tournaments.

Some of the recommendations by the law firm hired to investigate rang familiar to Ackerman, like her ideas about combining the Final Fours, negotiating a stand-alone TV contract and restructuring the NCAA organizational chart.

"What I don't know is how long it will take," she said. "I hope quickly. That remains to be seen. My questions will continue to revolve around structure and how best to navigate the NCAA bureaucracy to bring these ideas into being."

Kaplan Hecker & Fink LLP was hired in March after the NCAA failed to provide similar amenities to the teams in the men's and women's Division I basketball tournaments. The situation blew up on social media amid player complaints and prompted apologies from NCAA executives.

Ackerman, founding president of the WNBA and past president of USA Basketball, said she was interviewed twice for the Kaplan report and she provided investigators her 2013 white paper and other materials.

The Kaplan report gave a nod to Ackerman's work and other studies of the NCAA's treatment of women's basketball, noting that "while it is true that some progress has been made, all too often, the proposed reforms that came out of these efforts ended up doing no more than sitting on a shelf."

Ackerman praised the thoroughness of the 113-page Kaplan report and said, "This can't be a report that sits on a shelf for the next eight years. That can't happen again. I hope many see that and that everybody can be part of the solution this time."

Ackerman said the problems, and solutions, are rooted in the NCAA's structure.

The Kaplan report found the organization of men's and women's basketball leadership makes it difficult for women to get a fair hearing of its issues with some of the NCAA's top leaders.

"You have this sort of multitude of committees, and I think we make it hard on ourselves by having a murky pathway to decision-making," Ackerman said.

The senior vice president of basketball, Dan Gavitt, is supposed to oversee both the men's and women's games. Gavitt acknowledged in the report he has devoted most of his time to men's basketball, the NCAA's cash cow with a tournament whose TV contract value approaches $1 billion. NCAA staff told investigators that vice president for women's basketball Lynn Holzman has been left to run women's basketball autonomously.

Gavitt, as a senior VP, is on the senior management team and attends meetings led by the NCAA president. Holzman, as a vice president, does not.

Under that setup, women's basketball is not fully represented in important discussions within the NCAA or with broadcast and corporate partners.

Despite having the same senior vice president, the report found the men's and women's basketball staffs operate largely independently of one another and that there is little communication between the two.

"When you're working in the same company," Ackerman said, "I think there is an expectation that the right hand is talking to the left hand."

Former Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw, now an ACC Network analyst, said the lack of collegiality between the men's and women's staffs troubles her.

"That's something that should be a much better situation for the women's staff, to have the help of the guys that are running the men's tournament and get some feedback and some comments," McGraw said. "We just haven't had a good working relationship there. That can change overnight."

Kaplan recommended that the leadership of men's and women's basketball should be at equivalent levels of seniority within the organization and should coordinate to ensure gender equity in the athlete experience. They should report to a head of championships who would review budgets and participation opportunities with an eye toward spotting disparities.

Several coaches expressed interest in looking at a combined Final Four weekend.

"You know I'm an advocate for the synergy of the men's and women's game and think creative thinking should always be valued as we chart the future course for the NCAA and (women's basketball) in particular," USC women's coach Lindsay Gottlieb said

Also recommended was a reset of the budgeting process to make spending more equitable, and that the NCAA allot an equal number of staff to work both tournaments.

OVC sues EKU, Jacksonville St. over exit fees

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — The Ohio Valley Conference has sued Eastern Kentucky and Jacksonville State, contending they have not paid $1 million exit fees after both schools left the league this year for the Atlantic Sun Conference.

Eastern Kentucky and Jacksonville State joined the ASUN on July 1 after announcing their respective departures in January and February. The OVC said in a statement to The Associated Press on Tuesday that the lawsuit was filed in circuit courts in Franklin County, Kentucky and Calhoun County, Alabama.

The league says the schools have refused to pay exit fees agreed upon by conference members. The statement noted that exit fees are determined by the date of notice and added that both schools made them less than two years before they planned to leave.

OVC Commissioner Beth DeBauche said both schools benefited from being OVC members and expects them "to do the right thing" by fulfilling contractual obligations. She said league presidents regret filing the suit but called it necessary to enforce payment.

"To decide now that they don't have to pay the fee not only violates their contract, it is unfair to the OVC's member institutions, with whom these schools enjoyed long and mutually beneficial relationships," DeBauche added.

EKU said in a statement that it was aware of the lawsuit and disagreed with the OVC's assertions. It added, "We will articulate the merits of our position in the proper arena."

Messages left with JSU's athletic department and administration were not immediately returned.

EKU was among the OVC's founding members in 1948; JSU joined in 2003. The league has 10 remaining members.

The OVC said it reminded both schools of the exit fee obligation several months ago. They were ignored, the statement said, until both responded just before leaving that they would not pay the fees. It noted that Samford paid the required fee when it left the league.

The OVC said it has no ill will toward either school but wants both to honor their commitments.

Aresco syas AAC didn't plot with ESPN to poach other leagues

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

American Athletic Conference Commissioner Mike Aresco vehemently denied that his league has ever "plotted" with ESPN to undermine another conference by poaching its schools.

Aresco addressed conference realignment Wednesday during the AAC's virtual football media day, saying the league is not actively looking to add schools.

"Our conference has never strategically aligned or plotted with ESPN to influence conference structures," Aresco said. "We wouldn't do that. ESPN has never done that and would not do it. We do consult with our television and business partners on issues related to our conference. Everyone does, of course. But any suggestions or statements that we colluded with ESPN with regard to the structure of any other conference is a completely unfounded and grossly irresponsible accusation."

Big 12 Commissioner Bob Bowlsby sent a cease-and-desist letter to ESPN last week, accusing the network of encouraging at least one other conference to raid that league as it tries to find a way forward with Texas and Oklahoma on their way to the Southeastern Conference.

The AAC was reported to be the conference ESPN was incentivizing to woo Big 12 teams. ESPN denied any wrongdoing. Bowslby said earlier this week the parties have agreed not to escalate the dispute publicly.

Aresco said he has not been in contact with any Big 12 schools, but did say the conference will always act in its best interest.

"If there are schools interested in us and they enhance our brand, why wouldn't we consider them?" Aresco said.

He added: "We never talk about whether anybody reaches out to us."

Aresco has experience rebuilding a crumbling conference.

The American was birthed from the demise of the Big East in the last round of sweeping conference realignment in the early 2010s.

After losing several of its marquee major-college football schools, and having the traditional Big East schools break away to re-form a basketball-centric conference, the league added schools such as UCF, SMU, Tulane, Houston and Memphis and rebranded as the American in 2013.

The conference has become the best and most lucrative of the non-Power Five in football, sending a team to New Year's Six bowls five times in the seven-year history of the College Football Playoff.

The American has pushed its "Power Six" slogan and Aresco has become a vocal advocate for College Football Playoff expansion. But even with its new 13-year, $1 billion television contract with ESPN, the AAC lags far behind the Power Five in annual revenue.

The Big 12 distributed $34.5 million to each of its 10 members this years, though that number would likely drop as much as 50% in the future without Oklahoma and Texas.

Under the new ESPN deal, the AAC expects distribution to reach about $8 million per team per year.

Five years ago, when the Big 12 explored expansion, AAC schools were among those that applied. If the eight Big 12 schools being left behind by Texas and Oklahoma were to look to for replacements, it would make sense that AAC schools would be candidates.

Still, Aresco said the American is stable and no one is panicking about the next potential wave of realignment.

"Anytime you talk about stability, you never know what can happen down the road. So you don't want to overdo it," Aresco said. "We think we've got a group of great schools. And who, by the way, early on may not have had as much in common as they do now. Having played together for a number of years, having developed that kind of camaraderie that comes with not only getting to know each other, but having great success and having great collective success, I think that's really helped our conference brand and helped our cohesion."

DALE

they've got a lot to prove. Hopefully that comes to fruition."

Dale comes into the job preparing for the season while also building for the future of the Trimble County football program.

"We want to get a good foundation set," Dale said. " I think it's here, we've just got to channel it in. They had the layoff with no football for a year. We're really working on structure and organization.

"I want the guys to take ownership and look at it as a football program, not something to do," the coach added. "Pride and ownership are the biggest things that we have to work on."

Trimble County will hold its first scrimmage against Eminence on Friday. Dale looks at that game as a terrific way to get ready for the season.

"Hopefully what we've been able to do in practice translates to a game-like situation," Dale said. "Eminence is a good football team — we can't mimic their speed. Hopefully just the speed of the game overall in general that we're able to play and go from there and improve."

Trimble will then hold a second scrimmage on Thursday, Aug. 12 when the Raiders host LaRue County and Fort Knox in Bedford. The Raiders will then play their season opener in Week Two of the KHSAA 2021 season on Friday, Aug. 27 by hosting Caverna.

Department of Natural Resources Briefs

From contributed reports

Deadline Aug. 9 for state park deer management hunts

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources Division of State Parks is seeking volunteer hunters to participate in deer management hunts at 17 locations this fall including Clifty falls where only bow hunting will be allowed and Versailles where only firearms will be allowed.

Other properties where hunting will be allowed with firearms only (any firearm legal to take deer on public land in Indiana) are Chain O'Lakes, Indiana Dunes, Lincoln, Ouabache, Pokagon, Potato Creek, Shakamak, Spring Mill, Summit Lake, Tippecanoe River, Turkey Run, Whitewater Memorial state parks and Cave River Valley Natural Area.

Other properties where hunting will be allowed by archery only (any archery equipment legal to take deer in Indiana) are Fort Harrison state parks, and Trine State Recreation Area.

The dates on which hunting will be allowed on these properties are Nov. 15 and 16 and Nov. 29 and 30.

Volunteers can apply online at on.IN.gov/reservedhunt, where additional guidelines can be found under State Park Deer. Applications must be received by 11:59 p.m. on Aug. 9.

Management hunts are carried out exclusively to achieve an ecological objective — to ensure balanced and healthy natural communities for all plants and wildlife within park boundaries.

Successful applicants are allowed to take up to three deer, only one of which can be antlered. Deer harvested at a state park management hunt are not counted toward regular statewide bag limits. "Trophy hunting" — passing on does or smaller bucks to wait to take a larger buck — is counter to the ecological objective of state park management hunts and is strongly discouraged.

Input sought on fish and wildlife regulations

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources Division of Fish & Wildlife is seeking ideas on fishing, hunting, trapping and other fish and wildlife-related regulations in Indiana, including special permits regarding those topics.

Through Sept. 15, you can use a convenient online form to contribute ideas and provide input on issues the DNR has identified for consideration.

The form — located at on.IN.gov/gotinput — not only allows you to comment on ideas from the DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife, but also allows you to propose your own ideas on any fish and wildlife regulation topic.

Got INput users must register with a username and a password.

In addition, input and ideas can also be mailed to: Indiana DNR Division of Fish & Wildlife, Attn: Got INput, 402 W. Washington St., Room W273, Indianapolis, IN 46204.

After Sept. 16, DNR staff will evaluate all comments and determine which ideas to forward for consideration by the Natural Resources Commission.

PETS OF THE WEEK

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has a number of dogs and cats available for adoption in addition to numerous kittens that will be available over the next several weeks.

Featured Pets of the week include Pepe and LePew — two of the Shelter's sweetest kittens who spunky, cuddly and play well with others. Both have been vaccinated and fixed and are ready to find their homes.

To schedule an appointment to see an animal, email the shelter at animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov or call 812-273-1788 and visit sisaveapet.com.

The shelter also has numerous other pets for adoption so make an appointment to meet your new fur baby today or visit sisaveapet.com and those that will be available after processing

The shelter's adoption policy requires that all animals be spay/neutered and have their rabies vaccination before they can leave the facility. Animals that haven't been neutered and vaccinated can be pre-adopted but they will remain at the shelter until their surgery is completed. Adoption fees have also changed with dogs set at $100 and cats $80.

Those with missing pets can call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet.

Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption. Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call 812-265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call 812-265-2648.
